76 Hindu couples tie the knot

named Benazir and the groom Badshah. Someone jokingly asked Badshah if he happened to be the country's president to which he burst out laughing. When asked what he did for a living, he replied that he worked for the government, which made everyone burst into laughter.

PHC's Patron-in-Chief, senior parliamentarian Dr Ramesh Kumar Vankwani, mingled with as many couples as he could while they waited for everyone to get there. He was approached by a lady in one of the cabins who asked if he recognised her. "Baba, you gave me your blessings when I was getting married right here, at this very venue, in 2008," the lady reminded him. "And today, I am back as a guest at my cousin's wedding here," she added.

"I have given away some 1,850 brides in these 19 years," Dr Vankwani said. "I feel so blessed to be able to have done this," he said while thanking all his supporters including the Pakistan Baitul Mal (PBM), various banks and other organisations and individuals who have helped him throughout these years.

Managing Director of PBM, Senator retired Captain Shaheen Khalid Butt, who was also present on the occasion, said that there is a misconception that the Baitul Mal only supports Muslims. "I want to make it clear today that beneficiaries of the Baitul Mal are not just Muslims as they may belong to any faith," he said.

THIS WEEK 50 YEARS AGO

Rain in winter and homage to Chou Enlai

By Peerzada Salman

ON Jan 12, 1976, Karachi had its first rainfall of winter. It began to rain at 1am. It was widespread but came down in different parts of the city with varying degrees of intensity — while it drizzled at some places, for other localities it was a combination of moderate to heavy showers.

One of the a few ways of protecting yourself from a downpour is to get to a below-ground space or basement. The same day, on Jan 12, a news item in this newspaper claimed that a feasibility report for building an underground commercial centre at Jahangir Park in Saddar had been given by the Rapid Transit Cell to the Karachi Development Authority (KDA). According to the scheme prepared by the cell, a tube would be built connecting Merewether Tower to Liaquatabad (Post Office) via Saddar. One of the main underground railway stations was also proposed to be constructed in the same space (Jahangir Park) with a subway connecting the station to the overhead road. The commercial centre was being planned to have two main advantages: first: commuters could make their purchases and catch a train without walking over to the surface or without losing time; two, the traffic congestion in Saddar could be lessened. (Did it happen? It's anybody's guess.)

The traffic issue has a lot to do with the non-stop demographic changes taking place in a city. On Jan 17, the Provincial Health Secretary, Dr Ali Mohammad Ansari, described population explosion as the severest of problems faced by the country, stressing on a multidisciplinary approach to tackling the issue with the maximum involvement of doctors to control the ever increasing birth rate. Inaugurating a two-day seminar organised by the Family Planning Association of Pakistan (Karachi branch) at Pakistan Medical Association (PMA) House, he observed that Pakistan was the most backward in the world when it came to public health facilities; and in Sindh the facilities were even more maladjusted. He mentioned that the total health cover for the population in the province was 15 per cent whereas the five-year plan had projected that it should at least be 50pc.

China is also a heavily populated country. One of its most respected leaders was the country's first premier Chou Enlai who passed away on Jan 8. A few days later, a condolence book was kept at the Chinese consulate-general in Karachi. On Jan 14, nearly seven dozen VIPs visited the consulate to condole the death of Chou Enlai. They included provincial ministers Jam Sadiq Ali, Syed and Bashir Ahmed Shah, Tehreek-i-Istiqlal chief Air Marshal (retd) Asghar Khan and provincial Chief Secretary Saeed Ahmed Qureshi. Begum Nusrat Bhutto, the Governor and Chief Minister of Sindh — Ra'ana Liaquat Ali Khan and Ghulam Mustafa Jatoi — had also been to the consulate and signed the condolence book.

The next day, on Jan 15, hundreds of people from all walks of life came to the Chinese consulate to sign the condolence book for the departed leader. [Condolence] messages were also received from a former governor of Sindh Mir Rasul Bux Talpur and Begum Siddiq Ali Khan, head of the Gul-i-Raana Nusrat Community Centre.

Pipe work disrupts city water supply

KARACHI: The water supply was interrupted in several neighbourhoods when the Karachi Water and Sewerage Corporation (KWSC) commenced work to connect a newly-installed pipeline at Old Pipri to the city's main water network.

A water utility spokesperson said that the work was being carried out under the Karachi Water and Sewerage Services Improvement Project (KWSSIP), which aimed to boost the city's water distribution capacity and reliability.

He said that work was expected to be completed by Tuesday with the overall operation scheduled to last 96 hours. "During this period, the Old Pipri Pumping Station has been shut down, temporarily suspending water supply from the facility," he added. However, he said, the New Pipri Pumping Station continues to operate normally, ensuring partial continuity of supply.

Residents in the affected areas were informed that service would be suspended for the duration of the connection, and authorities urged the public to store water accordingly while the project moves forward.

The spokesman said that the ongoing work affected water supply in several areas, including parts of Malir Town, Shah Faisal Town, Model Zone Town and the PIA residential area. The Landhi and Sherpao hydrants have also been closed during the construction period. The KWSC estimates a shortfall of approximately 60 million gallons per day due to the temporary closure. — Staff Reporter

Karachi's heritage celebrated through paintings

KARACHI: The city's pre-independent past with reference to the architectural distinctness has in recent time attracted the attention of the artist community. There's a reason for it: the buildings constructed in colonial times have unmatched aesthetic grace, and given the current shabby infrastructural condition of the metropolis, reflecting on it becomes all the more poignant and significant.

Some of the artworks displayed at the exhibition.—Dawn

A one-day exhibition of watercolour paintings on Sunday evening titled Celebrating the Heritage of Karachi — Volume III by Hamir Soomro garnered a great deal of interest of art lovers and the media.

The show has nearly six dozen striking works of art in which some of the most prominent as well as not-so-renowned works of stone-made architecture of the Sindh capital were on display. Among the well-known ones there were St Patrick's Church and Eduljee Dinshaw Dispensary. It is evident from the works that the artist has a profound love for the city's glorious past because he seems to have made them with soulfulness. The soft colours and in some cases hazy texture of the paintings lend a symbolic meaning to the whole exercise.

Introducing Mr Soomro on the occasion, Arts Council President Ahmed Shah said the artist has worked a lot on the subject or heritage.

Mr Soomro in his speech said he's a keen observer of heritage. He has seen a lot of buildings disappear and thought one of the ways to preserve them was to paint them. "Gradually these buildings are vanishing. [Painting them] will make people realise how beautiful these structures are and we should value them. People don't have awareness about them. These are the kinds of buildings that today no one can make. There's money to be spent but no understanding of their importance. Karachi is a beautiful city. If someone takes its ownership, it will become more beautiful."— Peerzada Salman

'Social barriers prevent female medical students from entering profession'

KARACHI: Federal Minister for Education and Professional Training Dr Khalid Maqbool Siddiqui at an international conference has underscored the need for changing societal mindset towards girls who, he regretted, are often unable to pursue their academic dreams and productively serve the society only because they are not provided the required support either from their parents or in-laws.

He was speaking as a chief guest at the inaugural of International Medical Education Conference organised at the Liaquat College of Medicine and Dentistry (LCMD).

"I ask mother-in-laws, husbands and mothers to give kitchen tools to their girls but they must not take away their stethoscopes from them," Dr Siddiqui said.

The country, he pointed out, spent huge financial resources on medical education and training and it's painful to see that a large number of female medical students fail to come into the practical field just because of society's negative attitude towards them. —Staff Reporter
